'The Epigraphic Culture of Christian Nubia'

Nubia, the southern neighbour of Egypt stretched along the Middle Nile Valley, was Christian in the period corresponding more or less with European Middle Ages (6th–15th century). Christian Nubia had a rich literary culture, whose remains are known thanks to archaeological excavations. At present the corpus of Christian Nubian textual sources includes nearly four thousand inscriptions written in Greek, Sahidic Coptic or Old Nubian, and representing a vast repertoire of forms and techniques. The paper aims at presenting this material in all its linguistic, formal, and technical variety.
